Mother's Day - "Mom, I Love You!"

Objective(s)

- Let young children understand the greatness of mothers and recognize their hard work through Chinese historical stories, reciting ancient poems, and games.
- Through Mother's Day gifts and songs, help children learn to express their love for their mothers.
- Cultivate the good virtue of "filial piety" in children through discussions and role-playing, in line with Chinese traditions.

Brief Descriptions:

In the Mother's Day story "Cai Shun Picks Mulberries" and the ancient poem "Arriving Home at Year's End," children learn that Cai Shun couldn't bear to see his mother go hungry. He would go out every day to gather wild vegetables, even venturing to remote areas to pick mulberries. He would save the ripe ones for his mother to eat, while keeping the sour ones for himself. In group games, children take on the roles of both the mother and Cai Shun, experiencing his filial piety in diligently picking mulberries for his mother every day. Additionally, they simulate doing household chores as the mother, feeling, and appreciating her meticulous care, understanding her selfless dedication and hard work. Children create a "Happy Baby Box" gift using various materials, designing, and drawing patterns on the box themselves. They then string sparkling beads onto a unique and exquisite bracelet using a rope, as a small gift for their mothers, expressing their heartfelt appreciation. Furthermore, in the "Respecting and Loving Mothers" theatre, teachers and children discuss ways to show respect and express gratitude to mothers, such as serving tea or helping with household chores, helping children understand the greatness of mothers, appreciating their hardships and selfless love.

In conclusion, these activities promote the emotional bond between children and mothers, while teaching them ways to express love and gratitude to their mothers, demonstrating the virtues of filial piety in Chinese tradition.
