To further extend children's learning interests, teachers arranged for children to visit the "Hong Kong Wetland Park". During the activity, children carried out various small tasks, identifying different animals and plants, and making careful observations through sketching. In addition, children also visited different exploration areas, learning about various animals and plants, and developing greater interest and a caring attitude towards them. After the activity, teachers asked children to share the photos and works they had created, in order to help them organize and consolidate the new knowledge and skills they had acquired.
